

1953 JAGUAR XK120 UPDATE – AUGUST 22ND, 2013

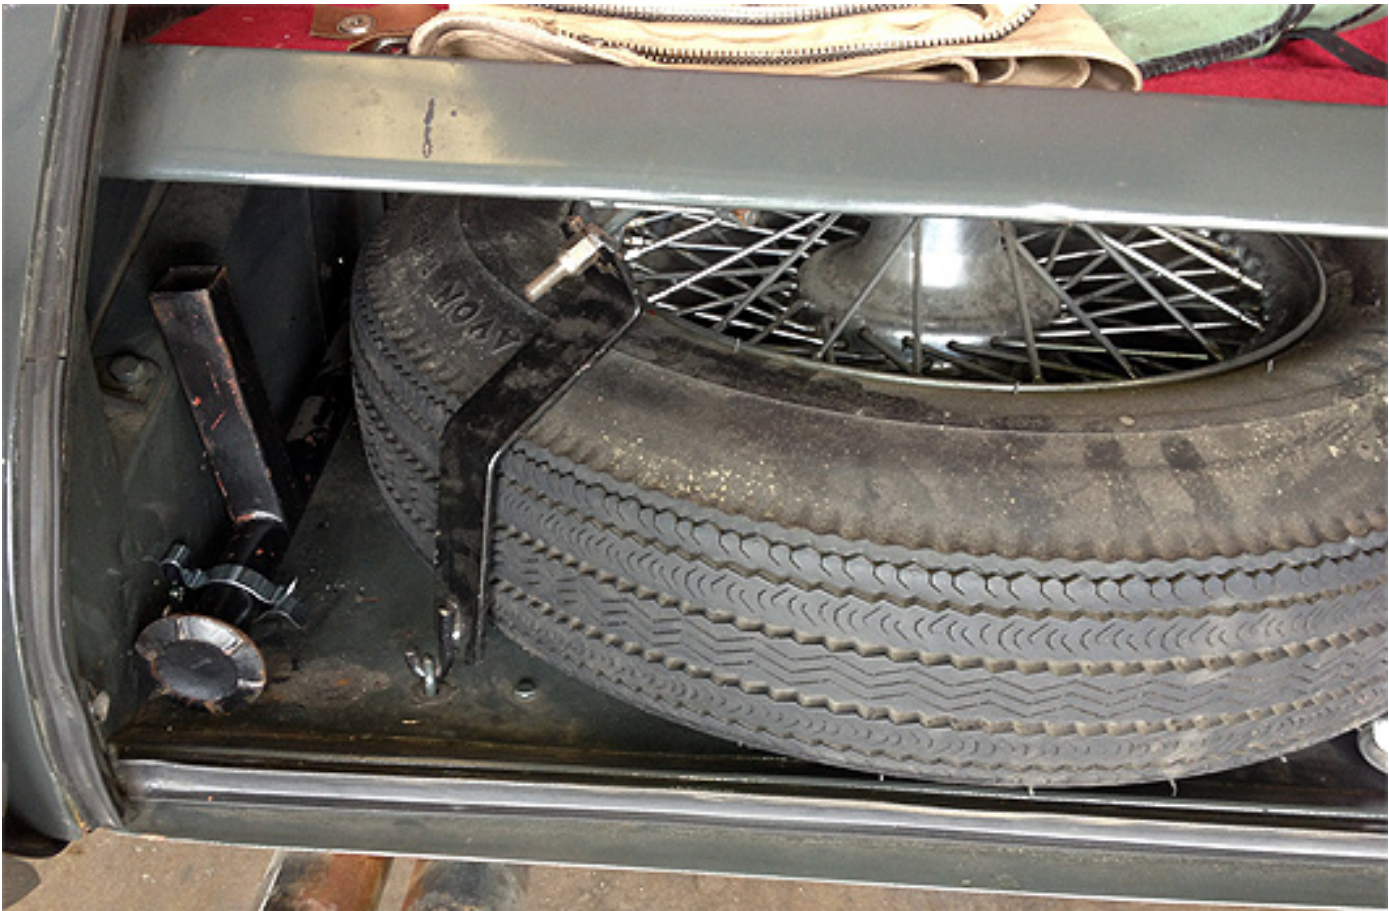

1953 Jaguar XK120 Update – August 22nd, 2013

This morning I went to take a look at the XK120 with it's newly recovered seats (see photos) and all the suspension work now completed. Plus proper Jubilee clips installed in the trunk to hold the original tools in place. She looks wonderful, as always but now, when she's being driven, what a difference! New bushings throughout the suspension, shocks rebuilt and new Kumho tires have quite transformed her. Handling is much sharper, the ride far more comfortable and I'm now getting a sense of what an XK120 was like to drive when it was new. Quite sensational.

Now waiting the radiator grill, which has gone off to be re-chromed, should be back in around two weeks. Then it'll be off to find some quiet country roads to try the old girl out on. Can't wait!

Site Contents © John Starkey 2013